The infant dragon, perched high in his nest on Mount Aerlbeth, stared menacingly at the inching caterpillar. The caterpillar, lost in oblivion, crept slowly along as the dragon planned his attack. Gilbert pretended the caterpillar was a naive human, dressed in one of those curious, but useless, metal suits. The area around was covered by little bouquets of flowers. Little flames danced in Gilbert's beady black eyes; he opened his mouth and let out a torrent of scorching dragon flame. His potent fire scorched the human to ash in an instant! Swelling with pride, Gilbert roared mightily and yelled "I AM GILBERT, SLAYER OF HUMANS!" Gilbert had a vision of himself becoming leader of his dragon clan, commanding dragon armies against the worthless troops who might dare to rise against them. When Gilbert came back to reality, he noticed the caterpillar staring up quizzically, one antenna barely signed. He stared in amazement at his surroundings. In the distant background he could hear a fleet of ship approaching.
